Global Immigration Manager

Education:

B.S., University of Split, Dubrovnik, Croatia
ERC – Global Mobility Specialist

Immigration law experience:

Said Boskovic is the firm's Global Immigration Manager. He has managed immigration cases in more than 50 countries for dozens of Fortune 1000 and other companies. Multi-lingual and highly resourceful, he can quickly answer questions on how to move employees into all of the key destination cities of the Americas, Asia-Pacific, Europe and the Middle East. Over the past decade, he has established systems for expertly moving employees to specific destinations, from the process flow for immigration/relocation to the templates and training programs used internally by HR and managers to help improve the efficiency and quality of global transfers.

Prior to joining Pearl Law Group, Said was part of Ernst & Young's Global Mobility Team where he was responsible for developing immigration policies and procedures. He was engaged in global communication with all levels of personnel and management in 32 countries. Prior to that, he worked for a large employment and immigration law firm where he acted as visa and immigration subject matter expert for dozens of Fortune 1000 and other companies. Said earned his Bachelor's degree in Trade and International Economic Relations, and is fluent in several languages.

Q. What is your connection with immigration?

A. Fleeing war-torn Dubrovnik in search of a safer life, I bounced around to several countries in Northern Europe before finally resettling in the U.S. in 1997. While my immigration was not initially by choice, the United States has fulfilled my ambition for furthering my education and professional experience. I know first-hand that immigration can be, at times, a grueling and emotional process. This personal experience helps me to understand the multi-faceted complexity of the immigration process for the individuals with whom we work.

Q. What is a fun fact about you?

A. Growing up, I wanted to become a professional tennis player.
